Kommers in Honor of "Doc."

On last Tuesday evening the members of the Turnverein held a social session called a "Kommers" in honor of Dr. J. M. Woodburn, who was to leave the city permanently in a couple of days. Doc, has been a prominent member of the highest turner class for some time and has won the esteem of the entire Turnverein society. As a slight token of their esteem for him they decided to present him with a solid gold watch and chain. A number of the order of Elks, of chain. A number of the order of Elks, of which "Doc." is a member, also wished to show their regard for "Doc.," and they had made to order a beautiful and unique watch charm consisting of three elk's teeth set in solid gold. The presentation was made by Phillip Andres, the genius of the Turnverein. "Doc" was too much surprised and overcome with emotion to reply with his usual fluency, but the boys applauded him to the echo. Later he seated himself at the piano and played and sang some beautiful selections in his usual accomplished manner. On Thursday the doctor took his leave for the Rosebud agency.

A JAPANESE FAIRY STORY. The Life of a Moon Maiden Visiting the Earth.

One of the best of the early stories of the Japanese is the "Taketori no Okina no Monogatari," or, as translated by Mr. Victor Dickens and published under the title of "The Old Bamboo Hewer's Story." The underlying ideas in it are obviously Chinese, says the Athenoum, but the treatment bears he impress of a more imaginative race, and; told in the words of Mr. Dickens. it becomes a graceful and interesting story. Of the bamboo hewer, little is said and no hint given of the hidden virtue which marked him out as a favorite of the gods. But just as the glory of Buddha appears only to the eyes of the faithful on the bosom of the mists which sprend over the valleys beneath the mountain temples of the god and the relies which to ordinary mortals have the semblance of dusky beads shine in the sight of the devout believers as lustrou tear drops, so to the pious bamboo hewer alone was revealed in the heart of a bamboo stem a shining light encompassing a lovely figure of a tiny infand. With reverent a tiny infand. With reverent care the woodman carried home the child, who grew into a maidea of such surpassing loveliness that all the nobles in the land sought her in mar-With her presence came fortune to her protector, whose only dread was that the time would arrive when he should lose the delight of her society by her marriage. But to his joy he found that she was as unwilling to accept the homage of her suitors as he was unwilling to bestow her hand. Five of her noble lovers, however, so persistently urged their suits that she had recourse to the expedient which in fairy tales of all nations is invariably adopted by unwilling brides. To each she set a task as difficult to accomplish as "num bering sands and drinking oceaus dry. The first she sent in quest of the Holy Grail, the sacred begging bowl of Buddha: the second was ordered to bring and lay at her feet a branch from the tree whose roots are of silver, whose trunk is of gold, and whose fruitage is of pure white jade, which grows on the sacred mountain of Horai; the third was commanded to present her with a fur robe of the pelt of the flame-proof rat; from the fourth she required "the rainbow hued jewel that hides its sparkle deep in the dragon's head;" and the fifth was charged with the search of the cowry shell which the swallows bring over the broad sea plain.

It is needless to say that one and all failed to fulfill the required conditions. Meanwhile the mikado heard of beauty of the maiden, and, like the kings in the German forests, the Russian wilds, and the Indian mountains he, under the pretense of hunting, an proached the woodman's cottage and succeeded in catching a glimpse of th lovely form of the lady Kaguya. So enamored did he become of the vision that he besought her to share hi throne. But no better did he fare than the other lovers, and was fain to put ap with an occasional letter in reply to the missives which he con stantly dispatched to the woodman's hut. At length the Lady Kaguya aunounced to her protector that the time had come for her to return to her home in the moon, whence she had originally descended to earth. And, though on the appointed night a strong guard was posted around the house by order of the mikado to prevent the flight of the maiden, a troop of heavenly being, escorting a charriot, descended through the air and bore away their prize to her celestial abode. HE PLAYED THE GIRL.

Donning Female Attire to Represent His Sister at a Party.

A certain light complexioned young man, with no visible signs of a beard, and his charming sister, Fannie, look a good deal alike, says the Albany (N. Y.) Telegram. A pink domino party was given at the house of a lady on Stafford street, West Troy, and Miss Fannie was invited. She was as full of fun as her brother, and when the latter requested that he be allowed to take her best dress and attend the party she readily consented. Wednesday evening Fannie assisted Harry in getting the temale toggery on, and arranged the bustle to perfection. When the jaunty little hat was placed upon his headgear of switche and frontpiece, he looked too sweet for anything. He looked exquisite, and crossing his legs at the party or sitting down all over the bustle.

Harry promised to be careful, and after the last bit of powder had been ap plied to his cheeks he sallied forth Fannie (or Harry) was the bell of the ball. He was kissed by a score of fair maidens, which caused the red blood to flow to his powdered checks and made him look more lovely. Harry was al lowed to enter the dressing rooms, and it was all he could do to talk as near like his sister as possible. He was en gaged for every dance, and was escorted to supper by a prominent young citizen who now is cursing his stupidity in not knowing that he was pouring his love into the ear of a man. Harry was escorted home and those who attended the affair would never have known the secret, but Fannie could not keep it and just told it to one young lady who attended the party. The story is now all over town and there are a dozen young men who would like to punch his head and any number of girls who feel like scratching his eyes out for the things that they said in his hearing."

Captured the Bluffs.

A large delegation of B. P. O. lodge of Elks No. 39, of this city, visited Council Bluffs, Friday night, to pay their respects to their chief officer, A. B. Davenport, now the proprietor of the Ogden house in that city They completely captured the genial hotel proprietor, and before he could collect him-self the house was in the possess of the gentlemen of the order. It was commonly reported on the streets of the prohibition city yesterday, that before the boys got out of the town old "Bud" had been put on ice and later his neck was broken. The entire hostelry was at the disposal of the company and a more pleasant evening was never ex-perienced in the city. Daiby's band was summoned to the hotel to add sweet music to the evening's pleasure and at 11:30 the visitors, headed by the band, left for their Ne

A History of Secret Societies.

A number of years ago, says if writer in the San Francisco Examiner, we investigated somewhat into the origin and history of fraternal co-operation, and were surprised, gratified and, in fact, astonished at the age and success of scores of such organizations the anothers the world, and as recently there that fraternal co-operation is of any age, or has any stability, or can be permanent, the following facts and comments are given: The oldest fraternal beneficial society in the world is the Count de Winton society, organized in 1173, and is still in existance. The next oldest is the Loyal Evanus society, established in 1358. The registrar of England reports eighty-nine friendly or bene ficial societies in existance that were organized in the seventeenth century, and over 1,000 such societies that are over fifty years old. In England 10,755 friendly societies are reported, with 7,000,000 members. Th Royal Liver Friendly society, organized i 1.5), reports 85,076 members. As the old world for many years has proved the value of these organizations, it has gone beyone my experiment and meets the patronage and o-operation of the people. In this country he co-operative feature is comparatively new, but as years roll by the great practical value and necessity of such organizations all be manifest to all. will be manifest to all.

For a time there was a great spirit of hat red and lealousy on the part of life insurance companies toward the secret benevolent associations. The life insurance companies have come to see and know that these fraternal societies have educated the people up to life, and especially endowment insurance and almost abolished the objections made by wives and children. People have learner that taking out a policy does not necessarily only that a man is going to die immediatel or that the paying of a premium is equivalent to a dose of strychnine, and thousands nov gold life and endowment policies that before hese fraternal societies familiarized the pub ic with the idea, wou d have looked upon i life insurance agent as they would some fore runner of a pestilence.

The feeling toward the benevolent as sociations has not been of recent date In 1855 the leading actuary of the world said it was impossible for the Odd Fellows to pay $5 per week sick benefits and $75 funeral benefits on $6 or $8 per year dues; but at the end of thirty years that same actuary is now one of the foremost advocate of the truth that co-operative endowment is feasible and permanent. The public gen-erally are coming to know these facts, and for this reason, if nothing else, the growth of all the orders having benevolent endowment associations connected with them is so rapid and permanent.

Meeting of the Senate.

The annual meeting of the senate of th A. O. U. W. was held at Cleveland, Ohio recently. In addition to all the old senators the following members appeared at their first annual meeting:

Messrs. J. DeWolfe, Columbus, Ohio; L. K. Parks, Toledo, Onio; F. E. Smith, Sag-inaw, Mich.; J. N. Study, Richmond, Ind.; G. H. Higgins, Warren, Pa.; G. W. Dexter and John Fairbanks, Chicago. The senate now consists of twenty-live members, eight een of them having been elected by assen blies during the past four years, which ind cates the change that has been made in th composition of the body. Among the important matters brought before the meeting might be mentioned the regular monthly assessmen on the 10th; another, requiring that a cop, of the application be attached to the benefi certificate, in order to conform to the laws of some of the states in cases where fraud may be suspected. The article relating to hazard ous occupations was thoroughly recon structed, and passenger conductors were ex cepted from the list.

A number of important propositions came ocfore the meeting, but were voted down Among them were. The reducing of the maximum benefit to $3,000; one calling for a lennial session of the senate; a proposition o strike out the suicide clause and a number of minor changes.

F. N. Gage, of Chicago, was elected president for the ensuing year. Lakeside, near Sandusky, O., was selected as the place for holding the next meeting. The Pennsylvania Case, When the meeting of the supreme lodge Knights of Pythias, was in session at Cin cinnati the supreme council to whom the Pennsylvania difficulty was referred took the following action: It approved the action suspending the grand lodge, agreeing that the grand lodge charter should be restored conditionally upon their complying with the orders of the supreme chancellor heretofore issued. The grand lodge is placed under the order of the supreme chancellor until such action is taken. The supreme lodge refused to admit the representative from the old or loyal grand lodge until the orders originally issued by Supreme Chancellor Douglass were obeyed. At the following day's session it adopted the report of the committee on en adopted the report of the committee on en-downent rank, authorizing the board of controi of that department to levy an assessment in addition to one per month, as heretofore when necessary. The following named delegates were chosen to represent the grand lodge at the right worthy grand lodge: John Q. Kenn, of Woonsocket, and C. K. Durbin, of Lisbon. Alternates, Mrs. Bella Barnes, of Aberdeen, and S. P. Watkins, of Ashton. The meeting was one of the best in the history of the order. Masons Picnic.

The colored Masons of the city went t Fremont last Monday to attend a picnic and general day of festivities in that city. They arrived at their destination about 10 o'clock in the morning and were met by Mayor Stouffer and a large delegation of citizens They were escerted to the park by the mayor and the reception committee and the day wavery pleasantly spent in amusements and seeing the sights about Fremont. nines were in the party and amused them-selves as well as the large company in a series of games on the local ground. company returned in the evening, afte having experienced a very pleasant day sport.

An Honor of a Life-Time.

An honor, almost without precedent in th annals of Freemasonry in New York state says un exchange, was conferred upon Grand Master Frank R. Lawrence, at the annual meeting of the Grand lodge in New York city last week. He was elected to a fourth term as grand master, a distinction which has been enjoyed, it is said, by only one man before him. Mr. Lawrence has devoted his best energies during his three years as grand master to the payment of the big debt upor the Masonic temple, and has been so far successful that only about $75,000 remains to b liquidated. The debt has been decreased $100,000 during the past year, and there is every reason to believe that another year e the temple free from debt, the old officers were re-elected at the same time with Brother Lawrence, and every past

About Odd Fellows. The Bloomington, Mass., Horald has the following to say of the order of Odd Fel-ows: hazard nothing saying that ladies make good officers in Rebekah degree lodges and are more deeply interested in the work of the odge than the brothers.

One prominent feature in Odd Fellowshin is that it helps members and families to help tnemselves. This is the very best and most practical kind of benevolence in a world like Candidates under twenty-one years of age were eligible to membership into our order up to September, 1826, but after this, for a while, they are admitted only by dispensation from the grand lodge.

The teachings of Odd Fellowship are towards temperance, and one of the fundamental laws of the order is that no intoxicants of any kind shall be allowed, not merely in the lodge rooms, but within the precincts of any hall dedicated to its uses.

Grip Notes. The total membership of the A. O. U. W. on May 1 was 203,831, being a gain of 1,649 in thirty days. Several tribes of the improved Order of
